LILIPUTIAN MARVELS.

WONDERFUL THINGS PERFORMED BY DEFT FINGURED ARTISTS.

Miracles of the Engraver's, Penman's and Mechanic's Arts-Every Letter in the Bible Written Eight Times Over on a Square Inch of Glass-

In previous articles the writer has confined himself to the discussion of "Currosities Re-specting Human Beings." It is now proposed to deviate from the rule and give an account of some of the rarest specimens of mechanical ingenuity which the skilled artists of the

Prof. Schumann, who lives at Berne, Switzerland, worked seven years on his model. The frame, hammer and pulleys, all complete, weigh but one and a half grains. fact that there existed, even at that early date, a copy of Homer's Iliad small enough to be completely hidden in the shell of a hen's egg. Professor Schrieber, a German inventor of a stereographic process, in order to offset the wonder vouched for by Pliny, translated both the Iliad and the Odyssey in so small a compass that the volume containing both books complete could be with ease hidden in the shell of an English walnut. We do not rely on the word of an ancient historian for the verification and substantiation of the claim of Schrieber, as the work is still in existence, as is also its author, unless he has died within the past year.

POSTAL CARD WONDERS.

In the year 1881 The Chicago Inter Ocean made mention of a gentleman who had written the entire first chapter of the gospel of St. John on the blank side of a postal card.

Among the hundreds of samples submitted for inspection the editor acknowledged that the greatest curiosity was a postal card from John J. Taylor, of Streator, Ills., upon which was written 4,100 words in legible characters, the whole embracing the first, second and third chapters of St. John and nineteen verses spice and sent as a present to the shah of Persia; an act which the untutored monarch did not seem to appreciate, inasmuch as he ordered the penman thrown into prison, where he languished several months until at last set free through the influence of the American consul.

This was also sent to the emperor. It is needless to add that the dexterous Habrew was installed at the head of a

In a museum of curiosities at Salem, Mass., there is preserved a common cherry seed, or stone, hollowed and fashioned like a basket. Within the basket are twelve tiny silver spoons, the shape and finish of which cannot be distinguished with the naked eye. The name of the artist who constructed this little wonder has been lost, but the existence of the thing itself will not be questioned by any one from the old witch headquarters of the Bay stats.

Dr. Peter Oliver, who was born in England somewhere about the beginning of the Eight-eenth century, tells of seeing a carved cherry stone that would be a wonder even in this era of fine tools and fine workmanship. The stone was from a common cherry, upon which were carred the heads of 124 popes, kings, saints, queens and emperors, and, small as they must necessarily have been, it is an-nounced, on the authority of Mr. Oliver, that nounce:, on the authority of air. Onver, that the heads of the popes and kings could readily be distinguished from those of the queens and saints by their mitres and crowns. The gen-tleman who brought this little wonder to England purchased it in Prussia, allowing the original owner £5,000 for his treasure.— John W. Wright in St. Louis Republic.

This social slip is even worse. A city man complained bitterly of the conduct of his son. He related at length to an old friend all the young man's escapades. "You should speak to him with firmness and recall him to his duty," said the friend. "But he pays not the least attention to what I say; he listens only to the advice of fools. I wish you would talk

OLD TIME MINSTRELSY.

THE "MIDDLE MAN'S" STORY OF HIS BURNT CORK CAREER.

With the Christies Thirty Years Ago-The Days of Small Salaries-A Disastrons Tour to Cuba-Living Several Days on Five Crackers-Beating a Ride.

A genuine old timer in the minstrel business is Joseph M. Norcross, the joyial inter-locutor of the Haverly-Cleveland ministrels, Mr. Norcross is not very old in years, only about 48, but there are few whose term of service in the ranks of minstrelsy approaches his. It was just about thirty-two years ago that he blacked himself up and carned his first dollar as a maker of laughs. It took a good many laughs to make a dollar in those days, and blacking up was not then the simple

Now, carefully prepared burnt cork can be purchased ready for use by the barrel, but the dark faced artists of a third of a century ago thought burned wood good enough for them. He had an excellent alto voice and a taste for instrumental music, and had made something of a reputation from performances with amateurs. Assuming the name of Joe Norrie and purchasing a violencello, he organized a minstrel company. The organization was known as Sharply and Nor-tie's minstrels, and included seven perform-The instruments of the orchestra consisted of a violin, banjo, violoncello and jaw-

THAT TRIP TO CUBA AND BACK.
He next joined the Æolian minstrels and made a tour to Cuba and Mexico. The performances were given under canvas, and the company, meeting with financial reverses, reduced expenses by discharging all the canvas men and making the stage stars perform their duties. His contract called for a salary of $30 a week, something really enormous for those days. He was with the company six months, during which time he received exactly two weeks' salary, paid in numerous installments.

They had many adventures during their Mexican tour. It was at the time of the rebellion, and while playing at Bagdad and Matamoras a pass was obtained from the Confederacy allowing them to cross the river and show in Proposition. and show in Brownsville. Mr. Norcross has that pass in his possession today. When the company desired to return to the United States a vessel was chartered to take them to New Orleans. It was expected that the voyage would be accomplished in less than five Township 25 N, Kange 7 W, Mt days, so only provisions enough for that length of time were taken. Contrary winds and dead calms lengthened the voyage to nearly two weeks, and they would certainly bave starved had they not fallen in with a small schooner, from which a barrel of crack-ers was obtained. The crackers were of Mexican make, half a foot square, nearly as thick through and hard as a brick. They were equally divided among all on board, each receiving five.

When Mr. Norcross and his company reached New Orleans they were dead broke. Without a dollar between them, four exmembers of the bankrupt minstrel company which cousists of a heavy growth of yellow and set out from New Orleans for home. It was sugar pine, spruce, and cedar There is a heavy

Having served as can-vasmen, we did not mind hard work, and husticd the bales of cotton about with such good will that the captain soon called us upon deck and said we had done enough. We gave a concert that night and pleased the captain so much that we were given staterooms. We continued to entertain the passengers, and when we reached Cairo were presented with a purse of $80. "I learned from the steward that the steamer Darling, which was then about to leave for Cincinnati, was run by splendid sort of peoplo, so I determined to try and got passage without paying for it. I went to the captain with the recommendation of the steward, and asked him if he would not give us our passage in exchange for musical entertainments. It turned out that the steward was thorough ly hated by our captain, who, in great rage, helped me through to my journey's end.

"I had nothing to cut from the time I left Cincinnati until I landed in Philadelphia, except one meal, and that was a big one. The train stopped at a restaurant and I went in and ate all I could. When I finished I called for the landlord and said: 'My dear sir, I have had a splendid dinner here; I have eaten all I can and have not a cent to pay for it. If I had asked your permission you would have refused me. Now that the dinner is gone, what are you going to do about it?' I expected that he would kick me out, and rather hoped he might. Instead he looked dazed for a moment and then said, 'Have a cigar?"

Soon after arriving in Philadelphia Mr.
Norcross secured an engagement with Cotton and Murphy (Joo Murphy) and his fortunes mended rapidly. Of course he has experienced the ups and downs peculiar to his profession, but his career has been unusually successful. His voice, which in youth was alto, changed to a rich, deep base and has gained for him an cuviable reputation as a vocalist. He has been with most of the famous minstrels of his time, and has crossed the continent seven times. He joined Havor continent seven times. He joined Haverly's company in 1884 and went to Europe with that mammoth organization. When W. S. Cleveland assumed management of the company in January, 1887, he was retained as stage manager, and has since retained that position and contributed much to the wonderful success this company has won.—Boston Globe.

"He said that the steward tried to pass off on him all the dead beats he could rake up. One of my companions was a clever piano player, and just before the beat was to start in began a performance upon the steam calliope, an instrument with which all Mississippi river boats were then provided. So merrily did he play that the captain's heart was softened and he informed us that we need not go ashore.

THE NEXT CENSUS.

A Washington dispatch says Superintendent Porter, of the eleventh consus, is busily planning the work for the experts who will have charge of the more important branches of the work. For the collection of statistics relating to the cattle industry and agricultural interests Western men will be placed in charge, while Eastern men will be given control of the manufacturing statistics. The statistics in regard to mannfactures will deal with the number of establishments, their output, employes, and sets of a similar character. The expert having this matte. In thinge has just returned from a trip to the manufacturing centers in Eastern portions of the country He has seen many leading manufacturers, and interviews with a number of political conomists, and communicated with the association of manufacturers and of trade organizations. The schedule to be employed in collecting statistics will be subnitted to the leading manufacturers, writers upon economic questions, and thers interested, inviting criticisms or suggestions. U. K. How to Change the Color of Canary Birds.

The following is from the proceedings of buried, and I am attending the funeral." the Berlin Physiological Society:

Starting with the observed fact that canaries fed with Cayenne pepper acquire a ruddy plumage, Dr. Saneiman has based upon it a scientific investigation of canaries, fowls, pigions and other birds. From these he has obtained the following results: Feeding with pepper only produces an effect when given to young birds before they moult; the color of the feathers of older birde cannot be effected. Moisture fucilitates the change of color to a ruddy hue, which is again discharged under the influence of sunlight and cold. A portion of the constituents of Cayenne pepper is quite mactive as, for instance paperin and neveral extractives similarly the red coloring matier alone of the pepper has no effect on the color of the feathers. It is rather the triolein, which occurs in the papper in large quantities, together with the characteristic pigment of the papper in Bolutun. Glycerine may be used instead of triolein to brug about the same result. The s atement bolds good with regard to the feeding of birds with analine colors. The red pigment of the pepper is also stored in the egg yolk as well as in the feathers. The first appearance of the pigment in the york may be observed as a colored ring four days after the commence-ment of feeding with the pigment dissolved in fact; after further two days' feeding the whole yolk is colored. Dr. Sauermann is still engaged in carrying on his resentches.

in Improvement on the Incandescent Lamp.

A patent has just been issued to Thomas A. Edison, of Liewellyn Park, N. J., for the construction of incandescent lumps, wherein the transportation of carbon particles from the filament to the glass will be entirely prevented. This is accomplished by coating the inner surface of the globe with a conducting material—that is, a thin, transparent, adhesive, semi-liquid conduct-The substance with which the giass is coaled is melted phosphoric anby-dride, containing just enough water to make it run over the glass. This is a transparent, gummy substance, and does not give off its water or any gases at the temperature to which the globe is raised in using the lamp. A piece of glass inclosing a piece of iron is placed in the globe, together with a piece of phosphoric aphydride, and the proper amount of water is added to the latter by means of a narrow glass tube passed through the exhaust tube of the lamp. This patent is said to be a very valuable one, and the invention is entirely new.
